Notes on an Execution: A Novel

By Danya Kukafka

(William Morrow Paperbacks, 9780063052741, $17.99, Jan. 24, Fiction)

"Notes on an Execution flows like a quiet river coming to a waterfall — lyrical, tense, and quietly explosive. This book is full of compassion for each character, even the killer to be executed. Kukafka has outdone herself with this book."

-Annie Philbrick, Bank Square Books, Mystic, CT

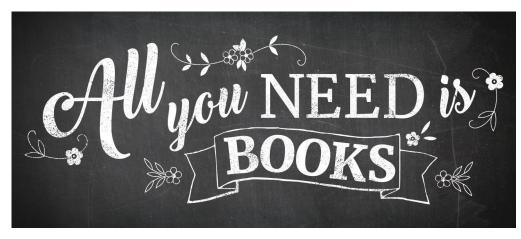

Something Wilder

By Christina Lauren

(Gallery Books, 9781982173418, $17.99, Feb. 7, Romance)

"Well paced and hilarious, this romantic adventure reunites soulmates on the treasure hunt of a lifetime, and surprising twists raise the stakes. Something Wilder shows the power of staying true to yourself to find your happy ending."

Really Good, Actually: A Novel

By Monica Heisey

(William Morrow, 9780063235410. $27.99. Jan. 17. Fiction)

This book follows a woman's first year of singledom after her brief marriage unceremoniously falls apart. Depression, delusion, and self-pity all star here, but the author handles it all with tenderness and a dash of humor."

-Tracy Affonso, Wellesley Books, Wellesley, MA

The House of Eve: A Novel By Sadega Johnson

(Simon & Schuster, 9781982197360, $27.99 Feb. 7 Historical Fiction)

The House of Eve follows two young Black women in the 1950's as they struggle with racism, colorism, and the many paths to motherhood. It will break your heart and make you realize everyone is fighting their own battle. Incredible." -Andrea Richardson, Fountain Bookstore, Richmond, VA

Decent People: A Novel By De'Shawn Charles Winslow

(Bloomsbury Publishing, 9781635575323, $28, Jan. 17, Fiction)

"Decent People captures what a horrific crime can do to a small rural community. You'll want to cheer for the characters, and you know that someone is responsible for a triple murder. How many secrets can someone hold before they break?"

-Shane Mullen, Left Bank Books, St. Louis, MO

Everyone in My Family Has Killed Someone: A Novel

By Benjamin Stevenson (Mariner Books, 9780063279025, $30, Jan. 17. Mystery)

"This is the best mystery I've read. The narrator understood that just because he was telling the story, it didn't make the story about him. Every member of this family was given a story arc that also directly connected to the whole! So good!"

-Hannah Oxley, Mystery to Me, Madison, WI

The Chinese Groove: A Novel By Kathryn Ma

(Counterpoint, 9781640095663, $27. Jan. 24. Fiction)

"Having suffered the profound loss of his mother during childhood, Shelley is his father's last hope and is sent to San Francisco to achieve the American Dream. Nothing in America is as he thought. This is a funny, sweet, delightful book."

-Rachel Watkins, Avid Bookshop, Athens, GA

Hourglass: A Novel By Keiran Goddard

(Europa Editions, 9781609458171, $25, Feb. 14, Fiction)

"Hourglass is a psalm for anyone who's ever loved and lost and loved again. Messy, darkly funny, and gut-wrenching, this poemmeets-novella will remind you just how fragile a heart can be. I will come back to it time and time again.

-Holly Voorsanger, Bookshop Santa Cruz, Santa Cruz, CA

Eastbound By Maylis De Kerangal, Jessica Moore (Transl.)

(Archipelago, 9781953861504, $18, paperback, Feb. 7, Fiction) "An emotional thriller in miniature, this slim, brisk book had me on the edge of my seat and emotionally invested in these characters until the very end. The poetic language is the work of a singular and transfixing talent."

-David Vogel, Literati Bookstore, Ann Arbor, MI
